Mucclean and Maclemens, of Sydney, and is now under the command of Captain Bishop, who was formerly master of the British barque Guiding Star, well-known in the China coast trade which vessel was burnt at sea on the 22nd. Oct., 1872, in lat. 86:55 S., long. 94 52 E.—Capt. Bishop contradicts the statement made that the Guiding Star was bound from the Mauritius to Melbourne; she was bound to Sydney. He also contradicts the statement that a boy was sent down with a light to look for a leak as there was no leak in the vessel. The boy went down himself, it is supposed, to steal sugar. He was seen at 7 a.m. getting water, and the said boy, named Clark, was afterwards heard in the after hold, when it was immediately discovered the ship was on fire. The boy never got up on deck again, and was burned in the ship. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

HOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous ob jects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word fully illustrated and explained, forming exe oises for students of a most instructive nature Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a van economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained; and dispensing with those vast margine and vacant spaces which have beretefore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast ecope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medburst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples Kwong Hing Shop, No. 57, Praya, in this Co-this work contains more than five times as long, as a Ship's Compradore. The Shop has MEMORIES. BY S. H. BRADBURY, There dawn dear memories of the past, To charm us as we muse alone. Like bues on land and water cast, When long bright days have almost flown Sometimes they come and fill the mind As stars the heavens when clouds are few; And there a cherished welcome find, Though old yot seeming over new.

They are the treasures-time-has made, To shadow forth the bygone years; Though dim betimes they cannot fade, .For each some bullowed beauty bears: Long slumbering joys such gently wakes, Forms of the past cach gently weaves, L'en us a cloudless sunsét makes

A cool red splendour mong the leaves. They are our day-dreams of a time " Ere life had felt the touch of care; Loved like some sweet bell's boly chime, That faints upon the Sabbath air. They are the celeves of the past. And with us when along they dwell; "For all their wondrous mysteries last,

GENERAL SQUASH. The General and I exchanged cards before we had been two days on the ocean. I am not demonstrative myself, and am slow to make friends, or I might have made his acquaintance earlier. I am afraid that I must chave expressed by my face, unwittingly and unintentionally, though certainly not in words, some little degree of surprise at the name of my new friend, Hiram Elijah Squash; for such were the words upon the card. "Yes," said the General, instinctively divin--- ing my thought, "the name is uncommon. and a little too remarkable for my taste. should have been obliged to my futher if he had given me a simpler one. But in our new country we love to throw off the old ideas of Europe; and parents give their children newer and more auggestive names than the eternal John, Thomas, Edward. Henry, William; Charles and James of the English. Our people ransack the Bible for names, and call their sons Solomons, Hirams, Enochs, Elijahs, Aarons, Moseses, Elihus, Jehoshipmats, and many others that they nick out at random from the Old Testament. Others, again, go to ancient Greece for names for their children. I know half-a-dozen people called Ulysses; and am acquainted with Solons, Hosfers, Lycurguses, Epaminondases, Socrateses, and Pericleses. I know Tone man 'out west,' and a very good man too, in spite of his ridiculous name, who is Ched Stakespeare Milton Lipplicott He is not in the least degree poetical, and deals - largely in pork. It is said on behalf of such manes that they inspire the youthful mind with a desire to imitate the virtues, or emulate the high character of their original bearers. I know, however, that in my case it is a fallure. How can I emulate Hiram or Elijah, I should like to know? My father rates of Premium at the respective places. was a poor man in Connecticut; his name was Jehoshaphat, and he sought, I suppose to give ma a name more ridiculous than his own. Hiram is a very good name, and would have satisfied me without the Elijuh, but he didn't ask my consent, and here I am placarded as you see. Nevertheless, my singular appellation has done me no harm that I know of; and if anybody chooses to laugh he may. The laughter of a fool does not hurt me, and a good man can make any name respectable. There is nothing very prepossessing about the name of Longfellow -it might have been Shortfellow or Bigfellow-yet our poet has contrived to make it great and famous. And your Dickens has a name that might once have suggested the ludicrous or the profune, but by the light of his genius be has rendered it illustrious. And Sciussh may be as distinguished as any other, if I can make it so by my virtues and abilities." - From St. James's Magazine. GROTESQUE SOLDIERS. From Pemba we proceeded to the Commore group, and anchored off the picturesque island of Mobilla. On August 20th some bf the officials came on board to convey her Majesty's welcome to the island," and with being payable on the issue of the Policy. an invitation to visit her: On the afternoon of the same day I handed with Mr. Shapcoth the paymaster for that purpose; passing through the village, which is chiefly composed of neat buts, we ascended the hill, accompanied by our interpreter and three Arab chiefs, whom, whother rightly or wrongly, I set down to be the prime minister, the foreign. secretary, and the commander-in-chief of al the forces. In the last case I was not mistaken, for as we ascended the hill "all the forces themselves made their appearance, buted unnually to Contributors, whether Shereand as they approached, the commandersinchief displayed his authority by exclaiming in a magnificent tone, and to my utter astonishment in plain English, "Halt," "front," "dress," "shoulder arms," which orders were carried-est according to the taste and fancy of each individual soldier. "Hallo! Jumab!" I said in a whisper, " that fellow speaks English, and must have heard what we said." my master, that man he no speak more shighish than that, they always give orders in English, but they only know a few." The appearance of "all the force" baffles description, and I would certainly advise those who have not great control over their risible faculties never to venture ou a visit to Mobilla, lest they offend the great men of that island, by appearing to ridicule what in all the fulness of their hearts they mean "as an honour, and an expression of their pleasure at seeing you. The military were all dressed in the old scarlet tail-coats, with -several different coloured facings, of English soldiers of a date long gone by, 15 years having elapsed at that time since they were superseded by the tunic. Let me add, that although the coats had once been searlet, that was evident, yet the different shades produced by grease, vinegar, or what not, had made them coats of many colours; some of them were too big, and some too small for the wearers—some would have gone round the man's body twice, and some would scarcely reach half way round, Nothing could be more comic in appearance. "All the forces" were headed by three or four cracked fifes and several tomtoms. We descended some way into the crater, perhaps farther than any provious scientific traveller. No one except Borda and Mason bas been even beyond the last cone.
